

New Town of Clayton Website Up

9/4/07

Clayton Town Supervisor Justin Taylor decided earlier this year to update the existing Town of Clayton website in order to keep the public, residing in Clayton and around the world, informed on Town activities through the world wide web . When summer arrived Mr. Taylor hired Matthew Turcotte, a high school student at Thousand Islands High School, to complete the project. Turcotte and Alicia Dewey, a recent graduate of St. Lawrence University and Town of Clayton employee, brainstormed with Craig Freitag, a pre-engineering teacher at Thousand Islands High School. Turcotte started constructing the site and it is now completed. The new site features a photo gallery, board minutes, news and information from the Town Government on current projects, as well as information on local attractions and contact information for elected officials. Additionally, there is a link to the new Clayton Map Viewer. This website allows the public to view parcels in the Town of Clayton and access zoning and assessment information, among other things. The newly updated Town of Clayton website also provides access to downloadable assessment, zoning, and FOIL forms.

Dudley Danielson provided some of his photographs to be used on the site. Freitag uploaded the site earlier this week. You can view the site at
